ABOUT THE PROJECT

In 2005, Miguel Fragata was 22 years old and in his final year of a drama course at the School of Music and Performing Arts (ESMAE) in Porto. In his final year, a professional production was ongoing: a repertoire play directed by a contemporary director. The chosen play was The Seagull, by Anton Chekhov, directed by Portuguese director João Pedro Vaz.

The experience of this production was marked by a fresh approach to the text and the surprise shared by Miguel Fragata and all his fellow aspiring actors at the possibility of a centuries-old play resonating directly with the moment they were living. Their situation as young artists faced with the professional world, their expectations for the future, the urge to create and the worries of an uncertain outlook on life are echoed in the words and the dilemma of the characters proposed by a Russian author in a work written more than a century ago.

The premiere, at the Helena Sá e Costa Theatre in Porto, was a success. All students finished the course and entered the job market. There were thirteen more actors and actresses that year. Thirteen more seagulls.

Twenty years have gone by between 2005 and 2025. These thirteen seagulls are now in their forties and are part of one of the last generations that grew up with the illusion of a stable career, the promise of a better life than their parents, and the belief that all expectations could be fulfilled.

One More Seagull explores the fate of the characters from the point of view of the actors who embodied them twenty years later. What are they doing now? Where are they? What happened to these characters after Act IV of The Seagull? Marya Ilinishna Masha is now a music producer, Irina Nikolaevna Arkadina is not a classical actress but a performance artist, Boris Alexeevich Trigorin is a copywriter in an advertising agency, and Konstantin Gavrilovich Treplev is a world magic champion...

We revisited everything they planned for their future, now that we know it, and we'll also look at the future they dreamt of for the next 20 years. Two decades from now, these young actors will be at the end of their careers. Maybe then we'll be able to tell the outcome of these characters. For now, it's a story that only fate can tell.

The Seagull is also a treatise on the arts, in particular theatre and writing, and the creative dilemmas faced by its artists.

To this end, the One More Seagull project proposes an in-depth knowledge of Chekhov's text that can be shared with the audience, acting as a democratic measure that allows everyone to participate in a common experience and knowledge.

It also offers a glimpse into the past, listening to the memories associated with different approaches to Chekhov's text that have been inscribed in the history of European theatre, in particular Portuguese theatre, through different productions of the play.

It also proposes to challenge young artists from other fields to work in depth on the text and its relevance in the present.

Finally, it proposes an intersection between the past, the present and the future through objects that consider and confront these three dimensions.

One More Seagull raises the question: is there any point in developing an artistic practice in 2025, in a rapidly changing world where civilizational collapse seems imminent?

The work of Formiga Atómica is more and more committed to the idea of a democratic and accessible fruition of its creations. The dismantling of language and understanding barriers that enable everyone to be part of the experience is, for the company, an important purpose. Therefore, all the creations which are part of the project One More Seagull has accessibility features, such as Portuguese Sign Language.

The Théâtre du Point du Jour – the theatre where Formiga Atómica's two artistic directors, Miguel Fragata and Inês Barahona, are associated artists from 2022 to 2025 – will host a residency by the project's core team at the end of 2024, and in 2026 the French premiere of Encore Une Mouette. By that time, a French Sign Language interpreter, or a deft actor will be fully integrated in this new version of One More Seagull. The audio-description script will also be translated to French, ensuring accessibility for all audiences.

SHOW

One More Seagull [Só Mais Uma Gaivota]

‘Konstantin Gavrilovich shot himself.’

With that final gunshot, The Seagull by Anton Chekhov came to an end. Then, the curtain fell and the audience applauded enthusiastically, celebrating the performance of those young actors and actresses, set and costume designers, technicians and producers, who had just graduated from drama school.

As Konstantin Gavrilovich, they carried both expectations and anxieties towards their future as artists - would they find themselves in the spotlight at the forefront of new theatre forms or, on the other hand, would their artistic ambitions slowly fade away, fall on the fringes of stage?

Twenty years later, Miguel Fragata - one of those young actors - embarks on a journey to discover the fate of his colleagues and to uncover what became of his former classmates. Between the blurred lines of fiction and reality, Miguel tries to piece together their lives, imagining the sequel to the fourth act of Chekhov's text. One More Seagull now emerges from this territory, , where the stories of these artists and characters intertwine long after the curtain falls and the 'end' word is written.

This bilingual production is a monologue for two interpreters: Miguel Fragata and Valentina Carvalho, a Portuguese Sign Language interpreter, who is fully integrated in the show. This piece was created as a bilingual piece, siding both spoken Portuguese and Portuguese Sign Language.

The premiere of One More Seagull took place in September 2025, in the small auditorium of the Centro Cultural de Belém (CCB). In 2026, following an artistic residency in Lyon, a French version of the show will take place at Théâtre du Point du Jour. By that time, a French Sign Language interpreter, or a deft actor will be fully integrated in this new version of One More Seagull. The audio-description script will also be translated to French, ensuring accessibility for all audiences.

Twenty years after performing in The Seagull, Miguel Fragata reunites with his former classmates in Só Mais Uma Gaivota [One More Seagull]. This project blends fiction and reality to explore life beyond Chekhov's play. It also includes a film, and an exhibition that delves into themes of theatre, memory, and time.

CONFERENCE

Flocks of Seagulls [Bandos de Gaivotas]

Centered around Anton Chekhov's play, The Seagull, Formiga Atómica brought together voices that have encountered the text in various productions over the last years. Flocks of Seagulls unfolded as a dynamic talk, where directors, performers, set and costume designers shared their experiences on staging The Seagull, creating a portrait of the last few decades of the play in Portugal.

The conference was accompanied by Portuguese sign language interpreters, Márcio Antunes and Valentina Carvallho. This activity took place in the Blackbox of CCB, on World Theatre Day, in a partnership with the Centre for Theatre Studies of the Faculty of Arts, University of Lisbon.

STAGED READING

A Seagull Comme Il Faut [Uma Gaivota Comme Il Faut]

A Seagull Comme Il Faut proposes a complete and immersive approach to Anton Chekhov's The Seagull, featuring an ensemble of actors who offer a direct approach to the characters. Ironically blurring the boundaries between reality and fiction, the staged reading delves into Chekhov's original dramatic text.

A Seagull Comme Il Faut directed by Miguel Fragata and performed by Anabela Almeida, António Durães, Beatriz Batarda, Beatriz Maia, Duarte Guimarães, Íris Runa, Rodrigo Machado, Romeu Costa, Simon Frankel and Vasco Barroso, and by two Portuguese sign language interpreters, Márcio Antunes and Valentina Carvalho, served as an invitation for the public to engage with the original text before it transforms into One More Seagull - Formiga Atómica's new production.

EXHIBITION

Diverse Laridae

Diverse Laridae evokes the scientific name of the seagull and its diversity of species. This concept served as an invitation to five young artists from various visual arts to dive together into Anton Chekhov's original text, The Seagull, and reimagine it in dialogue with today's world.

What challenges and meanings do these emerging artists uncover in the Russian author's words? And how do they respond? Each participant produced an object, a piece, an element, in response to this provocation. However, none of the artists was allowed to communicate with one another. Their work will remain unseen until the moment of their final blind date: the premiere of One More Seagull, when the full collection of artefacts resulting from this investigation will only be revealed in the Diverse Laridae exhibition.

The exhibition was displayed in various locations around CCB's small auditorium, where the play was performed. Its now accompanying the tour of One More Seagull.

DOCUMENTARY

Seagulls Ashore [Gaivotas em Terra]

ESMAE, drama class, 2005.

When Miguel Fragata and his colleagues took the stage for their final drama school production - a staging of The Seagull, by João Pedro Vaz - they were filled with uncertainty and expectations towards the future. As Act IV ended and the curtain fell, life began. Having all started from the same starting point, where have their journeys led them 20 years later? What paths have they designed for themselves?

Seagulls Ashore is a set of filmed interviews with the same cast members from two decades ago. Accompanied by images that have stood the passage of time, imbued by the spirit of Chekhov's text, a seagull will always hover over these interviews.

Directed by the duo JUNO, with whom Formiga Atómica has developed an intense and rich artistic partnership, Seagulls Ashore was screened alongside the premiere of One More Seagull in September 2025 at the CCB and is accompanying the play's tour. Seagulls Ashore will be subtitled in portuguese and french.
